MyRepublic does not guarantee that the maximum transmission speeds can be obtained at any time and access speed may vary from time to time. The actual speeds or latency experience may vary depending on various factors including, but not limited to, the equipment the Customer use to access the Services, the distance from the Customer's premises to an exchange, the Customer's device capability, and the number of customers accessing the Services in the Customer's area. MyRepublic's control of speeds is limited to MyRepublic own network. Connections to servers outside the MyRepublic network are on a "best effort" basis.

MyRepublic may need to test the configuration of the Equipment, and may need the Customer to follow directions to manually reconfigure any Equipment at the Customer premises to help restore the Services. If MyRepublic determines, acting reasonably, that there is no fault, or the fault was caused or contributed to by wiring on the Customer's premises or network equipment that was supplied by the Customer, MyRepublic may charge the Customer for any costs reasonably incurred by MyRepublic (including any Wholesaler charges) in investigating and resolving the fault.
